ABSTRACT. The data on the Balkan weevils in The Natural History Museum London collection, registered during the summer 2000 are presented here. Totally observed material contained 2033 specimens (including 20 paratypes, 18 cotypes), from 450 species or 78 subspecies categories, classified into 109 genera, 49 tribes, 16 subfamilies, from seven families (Rhynchitidae, Apionidae, Nanophyidae, Brachyceridae, Dryophthoridae, Raymondionymidae and Curculionidae). All according the newest literature sources of weevils taxonomy are listed. The all available labels' data and number of specimens are given.

INTRODUCTION

Even the weevils (Curculionoidea) are probably the largest animal group in the world (LYAL, C. H. C. & KING, T., 1996), they are not adequately studied in Balkan territory, except Bulgaria (ANGELOV, 1976, 1978, 1979, 1980, 1981) where more than 900 species live (864 listed by Angelov in "Fauna na B'lgariya", plus 48 newly registered species by 36 European researchers from 1982 to 1987 – BEHNE, 1989). Based on about 600 species registered in literature, for Serbia and Montenegro is realistic expectation of over 1000 weevil species (RADOVIĆ et al., 1995).

This work is modest contribution to better knowledge of Balkan weevil fauna.

MATERIAL AND METHODS

The entomological collection of The Natural History Museum in London (world part) contains some Balkan weevil materials. They were checked and registered during the summer 2000.

All label data are carefully (without any change) transcribed. Numbers of specimens are given.

Because material mostly is older than 50 years, label data of determinations are adopted to the new system. List of taxa is prepared adequately to the newest taxonomical data for weevils (CALDARA, 1983-1984, 1990, TEMPÈRE et al., 1989, ALONSO-ZARAZAGA, 1990, ABBAZZI et al., 1995, MAGNANO, 1998, ALONSO-ZARAZAGA & LYAL, 1999, DI MARCO & OSELLA, 2001).

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

Balkan weevils in the NHM London collection belongs into seven families: Rhynchitidae, Apionidae, Nanophyidae, Brachyceridae, Dryophthoridae, Raymondionymidae and Curculionidae. Particularly important is typical material. Type specimens (totally 38: 20 paratypes, 18 cotypes) belong to Apionidae and Curculionidae (PEŠIĆ, 2000).

The dominancy of Otiorhynchini (781 specimens, from 155 species and 72 lower taxons) is very clear. It once again confirmed that Balkan is very important center of speciation and biodiversity of this tribus (ANGELOV, 1976, RADOVIĆ et al., 1995). Especially reach is genus Otiorhynchus represented with 47 subgenera, 122 species, 46 lower taxons and 557 specimens. Follows genus Dodecastichus with 151 specimens from 17 species and 22 lower categories.

Unfortunately, some parts of collection during the 2000 summer was not accessible because of loan (like genera Mecinus, Miarus, Gymnetron).

A few specimens are not determined, and more of them need redetermination respectively newest weevil taxonomy. It will be easier after finishing of Fauna Europaea project.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am grateful to Dr. Christopher C. H. Lyal for giving me opportunity to work in The Natural History Museum London collection, to Dr. Richard Thompson and Mr Maxwell Barclay for help in navigation through NHM collection and to The Royal Society for financial support.
